WALDORF-ASTORIA HOTEL
 SCENE OF THE ROBBERY

Local Authorities Will Commu-

After ending the police authorities of New York City and Chicago said July 13, Peter Maris, a Greek, was arrested by Patrolmen Radke and Griffiths in Greentown Sunday night and taken to the police station, where he is being held on suspicion of being the man who on July 13 robbed George Metaxas, a Greek, of $800 in cash at $3595 in securities in a room in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York City. Maris is said to be an alias of the Greek was arrested by the patrolmen on a description furnished the from New York City.

George Metaxas and George Maskos, two Greeks, who had just arrived New York City from Greece, met Maris who told them that he would show them the sights of the metropolis. The day was spent in visiting the various points of interest, and both Greeks told Maris

Held Up His Countrymen.
When they arrived at the hotel Mariz is alleged to have drawn a revolver and to have held up both Metaxas and M...

kos and to have relieved Metaxas of his securities and money. Maskos had fortunately placed his money in the bank earlier in the day. Maris is believed to have commanded both men to remain in the room on pain of death and then to have left the room, locking the door on the outside.

He is said to have been accosted by an employee of the hotel in the hall-who asked his business, and who had seen him enter the room with Metes and Maskos. He told the waiter that both Greeks were "greenhorns" in the country and that he was merely playing a practical joke on them. The hotel employee then paid no more attention to the Greeks locked in the room until considerable time had elapsed, expecting, as he afterwards said, that the joker would return in time and unlock the room door. Although the room was fitted with a telephone and with bells, neither Greeks understood its use.

Denies the Crime.

When Maris was arrested and taken to the station he strenuously denied that he at any time had been in a trouble and told the police that he had just came to Salt Lake City about week ago. The police authorities claim to have conclusive evidence that Ma is the man who did the robbing in the hotel. Chief of Police Barlow will tele graph the police officials of New York today to the effect that Maris has been arrested in this city.
